A decision method is a formal system, starting with a decision model, that contains at least one action axiom. An action is of the form "IF <this> is true, THEN do <that>". An action axiom tests a condition (antecedent) and, if the condition has been met, then (consequent) it suggests (mandates) an action: from knowledge to action.

The buying decision process is the decision-making process used by consumers regarding market transactions before, during, and after the purchase of a good or service. It can be seen as a particular form of a cost-benefit analysis in the presence of multiple alternatives. Common examples include shopping and deciding what to eat. Decision-making is a psychological construct.

We drew on Colquitt (2001) to measure the elements of procedural and interpersonal fairness that we hypothesized to be related to temporal versus social comparisons. The items measuring procedural fairness were, "The evaluation was based on accurate information," "The evaluation was free of bias," and "The evaluation upheld ethical and moral standards."
